The Characters

Jim Hawkins: The narrator of Treasure Island

Billy Bones, Bill, or The Old Buccaneer: Sullen, drunken loner of a pirate with a mysterious sea chest.

Dr. Livesey: Doctor who treats Jim Hawkins's father: "A gentleman and a magistrate." (31)

Black Dog: A "tallowy" seafarer who surprises Bill at the inn; he is missing two fingers on his left hand.

Pew: Blind man, with a frightening voice, who is in search of Bill.

Mr. Dance: Supervisor of the revenue officers who are called upon to rescue Jim and his mother from Pew's pirate crew.

Dogger: Revenue officer.

Trelawney, the squire: A tall man, "broad in proportion, and he had a bluff, rough-and-ready face, all roughened and reddened and lined in his long travels." (32) Outfits the ship to find Billy Bones's treasure.

Flint: The most viscous of all pirates: "He was the bloodthirstiest buccaneer that sailed" (33). He ultimately dies from drink.

Tom Redruth, the gamekeeper: Guardian to Jim while Trelawney is away, securing a ship and a crew. "Grumbles and laments" about everything.

Long John Silver: A one-legged sea-cook Trelawney hires for the ship. Different from the other buccaneers, he is cheerful and pleasant, with a great sense of humor: "A man of substance." (43) Called Barbecue by the crew.

Mr. Arrow: First mate of the Hispaniola. Brown-skinned with earrings and a squint (51). Drunkard.

Captain Smollett: Captain of the Hispaniola. He is suspicious of the cruise, the men, and his officer.

Job Anderson: Boatswain who helps out as first mate when Arrow disappears. Later, a mutineer.

Cap'n Flint: Long John's two-hundred-year old parrot.

Israel Hands: Mutineer, coxswain, and Long John Silver's confidant.

Hunter: One of the loyal shipmen.

Red-cap, or O'Brien: A mutineer

Joyce: Trelawney's valet, enlisted to help the Captain defend against the mutineers.

Abraham Gray: One of the mutineers turned back to support the captain.

The old sailor tells Jim to keep an eye out for a one-legged pirate. When a man, who looks like the pirate Billy fears, shows up, Billy has a stroke and dies, but not before telling Jim that his chest contains something valuable. Jim and his mother manage to open the chest and find money, a diary, and a map. The local doctor, Dr. Livesay, figures out that the map leads to the legendary treasure of the deceased Captain Flint. Trelawney, the district leader, suggests buying a ship and going to find the treasure. Livesay is brought on board as ship doctor, and Jim is made the ship's cabin boy as their adventure begins. Write a summary of chapter 1 If you were Jim, would you go on this adventure? Chapters 6-8

The crew is getting ready to set sail on Trelawney's new ship, the Hispaniola. Trelawney sends for Jim and Livesay and introduces them to Long John Silver, a one-legged tavern-keeper he's hired as the ship's cook. Silver is an eccentric fellow, dressing in pirate fashion and keeping a talking parrot on his shoulder. They also meet the ship's captain, Smollett - a stern man who takes a dislike to the treasure-seeking passengers. The ship soon sets sail. They lose the first mate, not long afterwards, when he supposedly falls overboard in a drunken stupor. Jim is fascinated by the unusual cook and spies on him. He overhears Silver talking to a pair of crewmen, and finds out that all three are pirates, who used to work with Flint. They're planning a mutiny against Smollett, and when Jim reveals this to Smollett, Livesay, and Trelawney, they realized they're significantly outnumbered by the pirate loyalists and must keep their knowledge a secret until the treasure is found and they can surprise the pirates.

Should Jim trust Long John Silver? Explain your answer using evidence from the text.

Chapters 9-11

This begins as the ship is anchored. Silver and some of the other pirates go ashore, and Silver dispatches two of his men who refuse to join the mutiny. When the screams of the executed men are heard, the rest realise there's no use in pretending anymore. Jim, who has joined the shore party, witnesses one of the murders. He's terrified and flees, and while running encounters a half-crazed man named Ben Gunn. Gunn tells him he's been stranded on the island and can help fight off the mutiny in exchange for a ride home and part of the treasure.

Should Jim trust Ben Gunn? Explain your answer using evidence from the text.

Chapter 12

Smollett, Trelawney, and Livesay abandon the ship along with some servants and a loyal hand named Abraham Gray, taking the map with them. They come ashore and hole up in an abandoned stockade. The ship is taken over and the pirate flag is raised. The pirates attack the stockade with the ship's gun, and there are casualties on both sides. At night, Jim finds the stockade and joins them. Silver offers a truce the next day, but Smollett refuses the terms. Jim finds out that Gunn killed another pirate at night. Silver vows to take the stockade and the map by force, and an assault by the pirate soon begins.

Why do you think the pirate flag was raised at this point?

Chapter 13

This begins as the surviving mutineers flee after the battle. They've lost six men, but the Captain's group has lost two and Smollett himself has been badly injured. Livesay searches for Gunn, while Jim finds Gunn's homemade boat. He goes out that night and cuts the ship loose from the shore. Two pirates wake up and try to save it, but it's swept out to sea along with Jim's small boat. Jim, exhausted, falls asleep on the boat. He wakes up the next morning on the west coast of the island. He finds the ship and boards it, where he finds one of the pirates dead and the other badly wounded. The surviving pirate, Hands, attempts to kill Jim but dies in the attempt. After securing the ship, Jim heads back to the stockade - only to be startled by Silver and the surviving mutineers, who took it over in his absence.

How is Jim brave? Use evidence from the text.

Chapters 14-15

The pirates want to kill Jim, but Silver talks them down. Silver reveals that the Captain's party surrendered and gave up the map. Livesey treats the wounded pirates, and the next morning they set out for the treasure with Jim as a hostage. They find a skeleton, arms pointed towards the treasure, and eventually find the treasure pit, empty. The pirates attack Silver and Jim, but are ambushed by Livesey, Gray, and Gunn and shot dead. Livesey reveals that Gunn found the treasure long ago and hid it himself. They load the treasure on the ship, abandon the mutineers on the island, and head for home. At a port, Silver steals some money and escapes. The rest of the crew returns home and divides up the treasure. Although Jim says there's more treasure back on the island, he's happy to be home and has no desire to go back.

Do you think Jim will go back for more of the treasure? Why?
